Dear Wendy by Kevin Blackwell

This was inspired by JM Barrie's Peter and Wendy, more commonly known as Peter Pan. In a sleepy village a new neighbour causes trouble.

Markheim by Grant McDonald

"Markheim is my first play. It's adapted from the Robert Louis Stevenson short story. I tried to keep it close to the source material. I was drawn to it because I'm interested in the debate of whether or not people are fundamentally good or bad."

Susan Ferrier's Society by Sian Bevan

"It's based on Susan Ferrier, who I'm a tiny bit obsessed with, in conversation with her best friend Charlotte. The dates are based on reality. She did visit Walter Scott a year before his death, as her third book came out, which was the same year Charlotte's husband died. The rest, though, is kinda daft speculation, based on the amazing mix of bitchiness and morality which is in her books."

Jacky and Hyde by Karen Barclay

This play was inspired by the classic tale of The Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde by Robert Louis Stevenson. Their job is to tell lies and create drama, but what if one of them is leading a double life?

The 1786 Mauchline Poetry Slam by Tom Brogan

The all conquering Rabbie Burns returns home to meet up with an old rival. Flushed with success the prize on offer might not be the one he has his eye on.
